FACULTY OF ENGINEERING

I would like to extend my heartfelt congratulations to the graduating students who are going to receive their degrees and diplomas at the end of their study.

In a modern world, everybody is aware of critical infrastructure needs for society that range from roads for safe and environmentally friendly transportation to buildings to buried pipelines for the distribution of clean water. In order to assure that public and private investments meet both our immediate and long-term needs, we must develop a sustainable mindset, innovative project management approaches and technologies that create our future built environment.

Like any other developing country, Somalia needs a lot of work to be done to build its infrastructure. Many government and non-governmental development projects have been implemented since the end of the civil war in the country. These projects have involved and are still involving a huge number of civil engineers. Still, a lot of development work has to be accomplished to build the infrastructure in the years to come. Once the infrastructure is built, constant maintenance of the projects at a standard level is also a major task. These development activities are impossible to undertake without the direct involvement of civil engineers. Thus, there is a very good opportunity for the civil engineers, especially in Somalia, to participate in these development projects and hence build to their careers. Be it real estate development or construction and maintenance of telecommunication towers, water quality improvement or flood control, precipitation prediction or traffic planning, tunnel excavation or road construction, seismic retrofitting or repair of structural damage, civil engineers are fundamental to the development of this country.

By keeping up with the growing concerns over sustainability and environmental issues in the present world, the Civil and Architectural Engineering has become the modern version of the classical Engineering program in the academic arena.

Since its establishment, the Faculty of Engineering at Mogadishu University has maintained its three major departments: civil, architectural, electrical and electronic engineering. The journey of the department started with a clear vision of creating high quality civil engineers to make safe homes, supply clean water to drink, make safe roads to drive, make cities free from pollution, make large safe dams, warehouses, tunnels, seaports, airports, etc.

The course outline covers all the fields within the Civil Engineering discipline and it eventually leads the students to decide their field of choice for specialization. Specialization takes place in the fields of Structural Engineering, Environmental Engineering, Geotechnical Engineering, Transportation Engineering and Water Resources Engineering. These include studies on the properties of building materials, soil properties, irrigation and flood control, seismic analysis and design, among others. In the Civil Engineering Department of MU, the practical courses dependent on laboratories start from the very first semester and continue up to the graduation of the students. In addition, the faculty offers several diploma programs and professional courses that transform on yearly basis.

In the context of ever changing needs and challenges, the Department of Architecture, MU with its caring and quality education aspires to develop creative, enlightened, socially responsible and morally upright scholars appropriate to serve and lead the contemporary and upcoming world.

An architect is needed not only for building a house but also for building the surroundings, the city and in short, the environment. The environment must be planned, visioned, organized and sustained for us as well as for generations to come.

The Faculty of engineering at MU provides internships for its final year students who are being attached to various firms and organizations to work in practical fields. They get the opportunity to apply their skills and theoretical knowledge in real life situations. In conclusion, I congratulate to all our graduating students for the accomplishments of their academic goals here at Mogadishu University. We expect you to be the beacons of education and development in our country today and tomorrow. I wish you the best of luck.
